

As Dorko confidently walked through the woods he saw a rock which looked like a gnome.

He could hear a small wimper and a "Help me!" Come from the rock. He wondered, "Why on earth is that rock making noise?"

He heard the cry for help again, so he decided to try and help the talking rock.

Dorko had tried kissing it, hugging it, touching the nose of the rock and even singing to it, but nothing seemed to work. Until...

Dorko had eventually noticed that there was a shining red hat next to this rock. Was this something to do with the talking rock in distress?

Dorko put the hat on the rock and the second the hat touched the rock the gnome zapped back to reality!

The gnome was moving again and cheered, "Thanks, stranger!" As he handed Dorko his gloves.

Dorko had then travelled home after that ordeal he was exhausted!

